

Mark Fischer

Fischer is a lifetime resident of Ford County. He graduated from Dodge City High School and attended Dodge City Community College and Kansas State University. He earned his B.S. in Business Administration from K-State in 1986.

Fischer returned to Dodge City after college as a fourth generation Kansas farmer to begin a career in ag related business with his family. Some of these businesses include extensive farming interests, commercial cattle feeding, energy and commodities in western Kansas.

“I was honored to be asked to serve on the Authority,” Fischer said. “Water is such an imperative part of our Kansas economy and an invaluable resource that gives us the ability to grow and thrive as a state.”

Fischer is very active in his community where he serves on the Dodge City Community College Endowment Board and holds various roles within his church.

He and his wife Sherrie have five children.
